FRIENDS OF WARNER PARKS

METRO PARKS NASHVILLE

A Message From Our Chair & President

DEAR FRIENDS,

For nearly 40 years, Friends of Warner Parks has worked hand-in-hand with Metro Parks and Recreation to protect the extraordinary landscape of the Warner Parks. Together, we have ensured the parks remain free, open, and thriving for everyone — a gift that asks nothing in return and yet gives us so much.

This past year, our work continued with a deep focus on conservation and education, two cornerstones of our mission. Through ongoing efforts to remove invasive species and restore native plants and wildlife habitat, we are helping to reestablish the natural balance that makes these parks ecologically rich and resilient. Conservation is not just about protecting what we have, it's about restoring what belongs here.

Equally important is the work we do to connect people with nature. Through outdoor education programs, community hikes, volunteer days, and the Nature Discovery Program, we are helping young people discover the wonder of the natural world and inspiring the next generation of park stewards to care for it.

Warner Parks is more than a collection of trails and trees. It's a living reflection of our city's values — health, beauty, connection, and generosity. And it has always been free. In a world where so much comes with a price tag, this is something rare and worth protecting.

We are deeply grateful to our members, donors, volunteers, and partners who make this work possible. Your generosity ensures that Warner Parks will continue to thrive today, tomorrow, and for generations to come.

Thank you for your love and support of these remarkable parks.

Sincerely,

Bo Tyler

WHY CONSERVATION MATTERS: RESTORING BALANCE IN THE WARNER PARKS

In Warner Parks, conservation isn't just about protecting trees and trails—it's about restoring balance. Every native oak, wildflower, and meadow grass plays a role in a complex web of life that supports the air we breathe, the water we drink, and the wildlife that makes these parks thrive.

Over time, non-native invasive plants have crept into our forests and fields, displacing native species and disrupting the natural cycles that have shaped this land for millennia. When native plants disappear, so do the insects, birds, and mammals that depend on them—weakening the entire ecosystem.

Through science-based stewardship and community-powered conservation, Friends of Warner Parks is reversing this trend. We're removing invasive species, restoring native habitats, and reintroducing natural processes like fire that sustain Tennessee's landscapes.

Together, we're ensuring Warner Parks remain what they've always been—a living, breathing ecosystem where nature and people thrive in harmony.

Restoring Native Grasslands: The Next Chapter for Clare’s Meadow

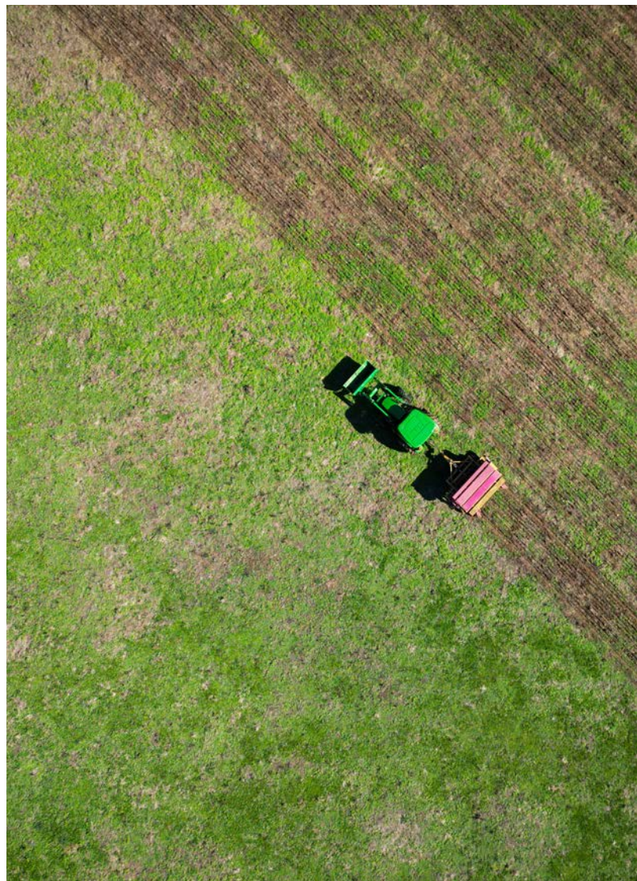

Last year, Friends of Warner Parks began a journey to bring back one of Tennessee’s most endangered ecosystems—our native grasslands. With the establishment of Clare’s Meadow in Percy Warner Park, we took the first step in restoring open spaces once teeming with wildflowers, pollinators, and songbirds.

This year, the meadow is growing stronger. Over 6 acres of native grasses and wildflowers are now taking root, providing vital habitat for butterflies, bees, and grassland birds whose populations have plummeted across North America.

Restoring native grasslands isn’t just about beauty—it’s about biodiversity, balance, and hope. These meadows capture carbon, stabilize soil, and sustain wildlife that depends on them. With every seed sown, we’re reconnecting Warner Parks to its ecological past—and safeguarding its future.

Prescribed Fire: Nature's Tool for Renewal

In nature, fire has always been a force of renewal. For centuries, low-intensity fires shaped Tennessee's forests and grasslands—clearing brush, cycling nutrients, and creating space for oaks and wildflowers to flourish.

On March 10th, the Tennessee Division of Forestry successfully conducted the first-ever prescribed burn in Warner Parks, in collaboration with Metro Parks and Recreation, Friends of Warner Parks, the Warner Park Nature Center, and the Nashville Fire Department.

Under expert supervision, small controlled burns help:

- Promote Native Plant Growth – Fire clears out dead vegetation, returning nutrients to the soil and encouraging native grasses and wildflowers to thrive.
- Reduce Invasive Species – Many non-native plants struggle to survive in fire-managed areas, giving native species a competitive advantage.
- Enhance Wildlife Habitat – A healthy meadow ecosystem supports a variety of wildlife, from pollinators to ground-nesting birds.
- Return Nutrients to the Soil – Fire breaks down organic matter quickly, releasing essential nutrients back into the soil and improving soil health for future plant growth.

Fire reminds us that renewal often comes through transformation—and in Warner Parks, that transformation is helping our landscapes return to health.

> "The South conducts prescribed burns on more acres annually than any other U.S. region – about 6 MILLION acres every year...."

The S.W.E.A.T. Team: 35 Years of Stewardship in Action

For 35 years, the S.W.E.A.T. Team—Special Work Education and Trails—has embodied the heart of hands-on conservation in Warner Parks. For eight weeks each summer and winter, a dedicated crew of park stewards rolls up their sleeves to restore trails, maintain park ecosystems, lead volunteer groups, and protect the structures and native habitats that define our parks.

The work is tough—steep slopes, extreme weather, long hours—but the rewards are profound. In 2025, S.W.E.A.T. projects included:

- Leading volunteer cleanup days
- Cleaning and repairing bridges, waterways, cemeteries, and signs
- Repairing and maintaining 30 miles of primitive trail
- Repairing drainage features throughout trail system
- Supporting summer day camps with Nature Discovery Program
- Clearing fallen trees and invasive plants

Beyond their physical impact, S.W.E.A.T. alumni carry forward a lifelong appreciation for conservation and community service. Many go on to careers in environmental science, resource management, and outdoor education—proof that investing in people is just as important as investing in the land itself.

LEARNING THROUGH NATURE: WHERE DISCOVERY TAKES FLIGHT

Every trail, meadow, and stream in Warner Parks is a classroom.

From young explorers building fairy houses to university researchers tracking migratory birds, the Warner Park Nature Center invites people of all ages to discover the connections that make nature—and our community—thrive.

Friends of Warner Parks proudly supports this Metro Parks programming, helping sustain staff, research, and educational outreach that have made the Nature Center a leader in environmental education for over 50 years. Together, we're ensuring that every visit sparks wonder, and every child has the chance to see the world through nature's lens.

A Legacy of Avian Research at Warner Parks

The Warner Park Bird Banding Station gathers critical data that informs conservation strategies, promotes biodiversity, and educates the public about birds and ecosystems—helping to preserve local wildlife for future generations.

Operating continuously for 44 years at the Warner Park Nature Center, this public banding station offers a rare opportunity for students and community members to observe avian research and experience birds up close.

During the winter of 2025, several banding sessions captured more than 100 birds—the highest number recorded since 2013. Notable captures included an 8-year-old Tufted Titmouse, a Hermit Thrush that gained nearly 20% of its body weight while overwintering in the park, flocks of Cedar Waxwings, a spring Blackpoll Warbler, a Yellow-bellied Sapsucker (only the second ever caught at Warner Parks since 1993), and a Red-shouldered Hawk (the first since 1988).

Eastern Bluebirds: Celebrating 90 Years of Legacy Research

Since 1936, staff and volunteers at Warner Parks have monitored and banded Eastern Bluebirds to track breeding success and deepen understanding of population trends. This pioneering project was launched by ornithologist Amelia Laskey, who established and monitored bluebird nest boxes throughout the park. In 2025, we celebrate the 90th anniversary of this legacy effort—making it the longest continuously running bluebird nest box project.

Today, a dedicated team of staff and volunteers continues Laskey's work, monitoring nearly 50 nest boxes each year. Both adult and nestling bluebirds are banded to study survival rates and site fidelity. To date, more than 5,700 bluebirds have been banded at Warner Parks. Thanks to this research, we know that bluebirds often return year after year—sometimes even nesting in the very box where they hatched.

The bluebird nest box project underscores the importance of conserving large natural areas amid ongoing urban growth and guides how we manage Warner Parks to support the health of all species—humans, plants, and wildlife alike.

Nature Discovery: Inspiring the Next Generation of Naturalists

Not every child has easy access to the outdoors—transportation, cost, and opportunity often stand in the way. The Nature Discovery Program, a partnership between Friends of Warner Parks and the Warner Park Nature Center, bridges that gap by bringing hands-on, nature-based learning directly to Nashville youth through Metro Parks Community Centers.

From February through December 2025, naturalists led 132 programs, reaching more than 1,500 youth across 26 community centers through after-school lessons, field trips, and special events. Along the way, children discovered wildlife, built confidence, and learned that nature belongs to everyone.

A highlight of the year was watching kids overcome their fears—like gently holding a spider and realizing it isn't so scary after all. "I constantly feel like a proud parent," shares Naturalist Elyse, "watching their growth, bravery, and joy as they explore the world around them. It's an honor to help create the kind of nature memories they'll carry forever."

Through programs and pollinator gardens planted with 18 native species, the Nature Discovery team is helping grow not only native plants—but future generations of environmental stewards.

Community Highlight: Nashville's First-Ever Native Plant Symposium

In 2025, the Warner Park Nature Center focused intentionally on connection, community, and conservation—engaging people of all ages, cultivating partnerships across Nashville, and caring for the natural and cultural treasures that make Warner Parks extraordinary.

Guided by the year's theme, "Native Plants," staff and volunteers wove native plant education and storytelling into everything we do—from programs and exhibits to restoration projects and community events.

This focus came to life through the first-ever Nashville Native Plant Symposium: Growing Knowledge, Cultivating Change—a collaboration between the Nature Center and Friends of Warner Parks that brought together more than 150 participants to share ideas and inspire action toward a more resilient, ecologically healthy Nashville.

FULL MOON PICKIN' PARTY: WHERE NASHVILLE COMES TOGETHER

For over three decades, the Full Moon Pickin' Parties have embodied the heart of community in Warner Parks. Beneath the glow of the full moon, hundreds gather each month from May to October to enjoy live bluegrass, local food and drink, and a shared love of nature and music.

The series has become one of Nashville's most cherished community traditions—an event where first dates, family picnics, and generations of park supporters all meet under the same moonlight. Each ticket sold supports the preservation of Warner Parks, transforming joy and song into tangible conservation impact.

In 2025, more than 13,000 guests attended Pickin' Parties, helping fund trail work, habitat restoration, and facility improvements throughout the parks. The events remind us why Warner Parks are so deeply woven into Nashville's identity; a place where music, people, and nature come together.

Young Friends of Warner Parks: Engaging the Next Generation of Park Stewards

The future of Warner Parks depends on the passion and involvement of those who will care for them next—and this year, the Young Friends of Warner Parks stepped up in a big way. Designed for Nashvillians in their 20s and 30s, the group brings together young advocates who believe in protecting the natural and cultural legacy of Percy and Edwin Warner Parks.

In 2025, Young Friends hosted two signature events that quickly became favorites. Blue Birdie Fest invited golfers and spectators alike to the Percy Warner Golf Course for friendly competition, prizes, and camaraderie—all in support of the parks they love. And Saturday in the Park welcomed guests to experience the magic of Warner Parks after dark, dancing under the stars while celebrating what it means to be a steward of this treasured place.

By creating connections—between peers, with nature, and to the mission of conservation—Young Friends is building a diverse network of emerging leaders who are committed to ensuring that Warner Parks remain vibrant for the next 100 years.

Investing in Place: Preserving the Structures that Shape Our Park Experience

Community is not only built through people—it's reflected in the places that hold our shared stories. Friends of Warner Parks has continued its commitment to restoring and preserving the cultural and historic features that make Warner Parks a living legacy.

This year, the complete reconstruction of a historic Octagonal Shelter brought new life to a beloved gathering space, blending craftsmanship and conservation to ensure it stands strong for decades to come. Meanwhile, Friends of Warner Parks collaborated with Stonesetter Masonry, LLC to enhance the experience of entering Warner Parks—restoring stonework, improving accessibility, and beautifying gateways that welcome over 1.5 million annual visitors.

The historic entrance gates at Percy Warner Park's Deep Well Trailhead underwent a complete restoration in 2025, stabilizing stone features that had weathered decades of use and time.

Each restoration strengthens the bond between community and place—an investment not only in history, but in the future of shared public spaces that inspire connection, celebration, and care.
